Join us for the final installment of our webinar series On the Right Track: The Transformative Potential of Rail! This session features expert insights from Eric Eidlin, Station Planning Manager for the City of San José, and Heidi Sokolowsky, Founding Partner at Urban Field Studio. Both Eric and Heidi have worked on and learned from passenger rail transit projects in the U.S. and Europe for over two decades. Eric and Heidi will summarize some of the key takeaways from the past three webinars in the series and reflect upon and ask how global insights from world-class station design can influence the future of multimodal transit in California, the U.S., and beyond. They will also consider how recent federal policy shifts could influence the trajectory of high-speed rail projects in the U.S. Don't miss this opportunity to join the conversation shaping the future of rail!
